"Of course you are his friend." "It makes no difference."

"No," she assented doubtfully; "only in the point of view. It would create a certain prejudice, the friendliness. I mean in his favor, and you don't know Marjorie as I do." Stephen glanced down the long, candle shaded dinner table to where Marjarie sat. A group of yellow chrysanthemums mingled their gold with the tint of her hair, and her face was half hidden by them. Only a slightly tilted chin was visible. It was a delicious chin, piquant and interrogative, and he knew that she was talking to Haworth. "Do you think she is serious?" he

"Oh, not yet. But she drifts with him, and that is one of his most attrac tive qualities, drifting. You drift and drift and think you are steering, and all at once"-

She hesitated frowningly.

"Overboard?" suggested Stephen. "Yes, when you never dreamed of be ing in love. He seems so harmless, so colorless. You know what I mean. Most men have to be amused. You feel on guard with them. But Haworth is restful. Before you know it you are perfectly natural with him, and you talk and drift and talk, and all he says is yes, yes, and all he does is look at you, not as if you were just a rather good looking girl, but as if you were really a thinking, reasoning individual. And Marjorie will like that. And then some day she'll look in his eyes and waken and lose self in love."

"Cribbed," said Stephen softly. "Awfully pretty, Con, but it's an echo from a greater even than thou. Have some of the salmon a la heaven knows what. It's coming our way. Don't you re-

"Stephen, you are a dear," she said. "You are a blessed relief to a threatened possibility of sentiment. After Marjorie's married to Haworth I think I shall adopt you."

nose, could add neither age nor wisdom

"No. The possibility only threatened. It never came true, and, besides, I am three years older than Marjorie. Would you think I was twenty-six. Steve?"

Stephen turned the rimless eyeglasse on her with cheerful scrutiny. "Thirty-nine," he said pleasantly.

"How long were you engaged to him?" "Two weeks and a half."

"Last October?" She nodded her head. "It's a bad time of the year for en tience. "It isn't that I don't want to se Marjorie happy or that I care about last October. I am afraid she will waken as I did. He is so perfectly colorless in temperament that it is simply infuriating. A girl doesn't seek a new engagement every summer, Steve I never was engaged before, and, don't you know, when you've been looking forward to something ever since you could chase butterflies, to falling in love with the one man who was to be your prince of dreams, and all at once you think you've found him, and you love him and promise to be his wife. and nothing happens at all, why, you feel like the boy who spent all his Fourth of July money for one sky rocket, and then it wouldn't go off."

"Better said boy than the boy who shoots the merry rocket and then gets unmercifully batted with the fallen stick," said Stephen gently and philosophically.

"Haworth was just the same. He never seemed to understand how wonderful it all was to me or how a girl wants it to be wonderful. We were good, stanch friends and comrades, and he cared for me, I know he did, last October, but there was the rose mist missing. He wasn't my prince of dreams. He was just himself. One likes the rose mists of life, you know even if one knows they are all illusion They give a glory to the path behind and the hills ahead." "But they aren't worth a cent close around," said Stephen. "Rose mists aren't worth a rap floating around oneself when one is busy living today. Seems to me I wouldn't want any illusions around the one I loved best either. And I don't think Marjorie would. Haworth's a splendid old chap. We've been friends for over ten years. He's given me many a hand grip over tough places in the first days when I was only a fresh kid fighting for a place in the crowd, and he's always the same. It may be monotonous, but it's mighty comforting. Perhaps after ten years even you might be glad to MINING LUTTER AND TIMBER. find a man unchanged."

"Perhaps." She smiled bitterly, but bravely still. He looked into her eyes interestedly. 'Honest, don't you care, Con?"

She hesitated. "Not as long as it is Marjorie, and she will be happy." Her voice was low. "Of course one may still remember the prince of dreams when the dreams never came true."

Stephen glanced at the two beyond the yellow chrysanthemums. Haworth was looking at Constance, and Marjorie's quick smile flashed on him for an instant. He bent toward Constance again and spoke slowly. "Haworth was up to my place last night, and we talked sense. No rose mists or dreams, just plain sense. And I told him that I was going to marry the dearest girl in the world if she'd have me."

"Stephen!" Her face was radiant, her tone tender and maternal in its quick sympathy. "I'm so glad for

"If she'd have me," repeated Stephen modestly. And Haworth opened up and told me a few things about a certain dearest girl whom he had wanted to marry, but she wouldn't have him. He wasn't bitter, you understand, or wearing crape for any dead hopes. He just told me. He doesn't quite understand why she gave him up, but he believes she loved him and that some day the world will seem lonesome and strange to her, and the rose mists she cared for will have faded. Then he thinks she may be glad to find him unchanged.

"Stephen!" She turned her head and met Haworth's gaze. His eyes were restful and steady, as she had loved best to remember them.

"And I told him," continued Stephen mildly, "not to wait for the lonesome time, to take the day he was sure of. And he said he thought he'd by tonight." "But Mariorie!"

Her face flushed and her lips half parted. She was still looking beyond the yellow chrysanthemums. Stephen smiled across the table.

"The dearest girl in the world said yes just half an hour ago," he said.

To New York For Rest. Isn't it strange that people should go to New York to rest up? You know what Broadway and Fifth avenue are from Thirtieth to Thirty-fifth streetthe densest, noisiest place in the world. Yet I know a prominent Pittsburg man who, when he gets tired, slams down his roll top desk, seizes his case and takes the train east. In New York he patronizes a well known hotel much favored by Pittsburgers, asks for a room on the twelfth floor, and if he gets it or one on the floor either above or below he is happy. Twelve floors up he is removed from the noise of the busy pavement below. So far as quietude is concerned he might as well be one of enchantment, watching the ves- sell at the LOWEST CASH PRICES. sels moving to and fro, with their myriad of lights. And although there is gayety below in a dozen corners of that selfsame hotel no sound of it ever penetrates to his quarters.
